Joe Henderson discography - Wikipedia

Potential buyers should be aware that this 4-disc set is a sampler of Joe Henderson's work as the de facto in-house tenor saxophonist for Blue Note, circa 1963-69. While there's obviously some brilliant music here, without the context of a consistent rhythm section and musical context, to me the effect of moving through these discs was a little ...

Joe Henderson has never really been a `name` outside of jazz circles - after all, the average person in the street may well have heard of Miles, Coltrane, Stan Getz, Chet Baker, or even Mingus, but rarely Joe - and this is a pity. He`s a tremendous sax player with a back catalogue which might be the envy of many musicians.

From November 14 to 16 in 1985, the Joe Henderson trio held court at the Village Vanguard for a legendary 10-set engagement, some of which was recorded for Blue Note and released in 1986 as two volumes under the declarative banner The State of the Tenor.The saxophone titan was 48 at the time, and sat comfortably at the top of the heap among his peers. The great pugilist of the instrument, his ...

Joe Henderson - State of the Tenor Vol. 1: Blue Note Tone ...

Tenor saxophonist Joe Henderson has had a remarkably consistent career. Although he has spent periods (such as the 1970s) in relative obscurity and others as almost a jazz superstar, Henderson's style and sound has been relatively unchanged since the 1960s. This lesser-known album finds Henderson in typically fine form in an acoustic quartet with pianist Chick Corea, bassist Ron Carter and ...
